About the Teacher

I grew up in Virginia, where I met my husband of fourteen years, Jordan Clark, current Theology teacher at Christ Covenant School. I attended East Carolina University and earned a bachelor's degree in Elementary Education. I taught second and third grade at Christ Covenant School for over five years, before becoming an instructional coach and reading specialist. I currently homeschool my four children. I love classical education, nature, kids, and Jesus!

From the Teacher... Love Thy Neighbor is something I am passionate about and try to model daily for my children. The Lord calls us to "love your neighbor as yourself." In this camp, we will first take a deep look at what love is and how we can show that love to others. We will be working together to bring more light into our community. We will be His hands this week as we focus on missions and outreach, serving others, and becoming more like Him.
